

Century Furniture bringing new Richard Frinier line to High Point Market

Line inspired by Morocco

Alex Milstein, October 8, 2018

A lounge chair from the Tangier collection

HIGH POINT, N.C. – The Tangier collection, a new outdoor furniture collaboration between Century Furniture and designer Richard Frinier, will be on display at fall High Point Market in Century showroom 213 at 200 Steele Street.

"The Tangier collection embodies a strong sense of place capturing the romantic and exotic essence of authentic Moorish architecture that I discovered on an extended stay in Morocco," Frinier says. "Distinctive forms with arched Moroccan design details are accentuated with an artfully hand-woven and open-weave pattern with a very specific fretwork motif. Its modern appeal is infused into each memorable piece, summoning you to unwind in a spectacularly faceted crescent-shaped and endlessly configurable modular lounge with coordinating woven or teak occasional tables creating the ultimate resort-at-home destination for lingering, entertaining and relaxing."

Over the past 16 years, Century Furniture and Frinier have launched many collections reflecting original styles and multiple award-winning creations infused with design elements and embellishments inspired by the designer's travels to more than 40 countries across five continents.

Richard Frinier

This design aesthetic, combined with a very high level of attention to detail, artisan craftsmanship, superior execution and exceptional customer service from Century, have each played a role in making this collaboration one to watch throughout the industry.

"Richard Frinier's newest collection, Tangier, shows a progression into more mixed materials," says Haynes King, director of outdoor for Century Furniture. "Mixing natural teak with scagliola stone on occasional pieces complements the all-weather resin woven frames. It continues our opulent scale in an updated transitional collection."